Team training

We also offer online training that can be shared with your colleagues in multiple locations.

The course will be dedicated to your organization, so you benefit directly from a consistent, flexible approach that provides personal development for your colleagues, no matter where they're located.

How it works

The interactive experience uses the same learning techniques as classroom courses, with activities, breakouts, teamwork and discussions – so you get the same value, skills, knowledge and learning outcomes.

Your course materials, your exam, and your internationally recognized certificate – are all provided digitally as part of our commitment to sustainable development goals.

Why choose BSI

At BSI, we're as innovative today as we've always been – bringing together experts in a range of industry sectors to help make our world a safer place.

We have a team of expert tutors working across the world who can transfer the knowledge, skills and tools your people need to embed excellence into your organization. They have vast amounts of training and assessment experience, and work across a wide range of business sectors.

They know best how to transform your organization by training those who can make that change – that's how we turn our experience into your expertise.

Training to meet your needs

To support your professional career, BSI offers a range of qualifications as well as individual training courses. By completing a series of courses and assessment, you can earn a BSI mark of trust, giving your employer and your customers complete confidence in your skills and knowledge.

You can opt to have your qualification certified – an ongoing programme of evidence to prove your skills are up to date.

Our training courses cover industry sector schemes including food, built environment, aerospace, automotive and medical device manufacturing. Topics range from quality and information security to environment and health, safety and wellbeing.

We can work with you to identify your training needs so that you can select the right courses for your organization, delivered to the right people in the most appropriate format.

As an organization, you may have a range of training needs – from understanding the requirements of a management system standard to specific techniques such as risk-based thinking. We can work with you to identify the right courses for your business needs.
